Description

The event will highlight the 50th anniversary of the CFS (1974), the 20th anniversary of the Right to Food Guidelines (2004), and the 15th anniversary of the CFS Reform (2009) where States, international organizations, CSOs, Indigenous Peoples' organizations and the private sector strive to collectively embrace the challenges and responsibility associated with building inclusive and sustainable food systems anchored in human rights. It will highlight the pivotal role of the right to food in tackling interconnected issues that affect people and the planet, guiding national responses to the food crisis, fostering international coordination, and shaping food systems transformation, providing a solid legal framework for cohesive responses.

The event will also discuss the role of several other international instruments (such as CFS policy outcomes, ICESCR, CEDAW, CRC, CRPD, UNDROP, UNDRIP, ILO conventions, and CEDAW General Recommendations) in complementing the understanding of the right to adequate food, constituting an advanced normative framework for the realization of this right.
