Q9 Mountain environments are not specifically mentioned in the UNFCCC, UNCCD, CBD
Funding for mountain specific programmes/projects is difficult to obtain
Other (please specify):
Lack of understanding of impacts (weak link science to policy at local/regional level) Often, impacts of changes in high mountain regions are felt in lowlands or in countries other than where changes occur, being transmitted from headwaters downstream by hydrological systems, to vast human populations and the oceans. Even national agendas can be problematic in that mountainous regions may constitute only a part of the country's territory, with low population densities, and with limited leverage over the ranking of national priority policies.

Facilitate the participation of the MP focal point in regional networks on sustainable mountain development	2
Develop briefs on sustainable mountain development policies	1
Other (Please, specify in the box below)	3
Other (please specify)	Sustained collaborative engagements with other organizations to reach different levels of policy making mechanisms and different influencers. Exceeding a critical threshold of interest and awareness is the only way to put mountains ahead of other competing priorities, e.g. densely populated areas.

Q9

What are the main challenges you face related to increasing efforts towards the implementation of the 2030 Agenda for mountains?

Mountain environments are not specifically mentioned in the UNFCCC, UNCCD, CBD

Funding for mountain specific programmes/projects is difficult to obtain

Other (please specify):

The challenges related to increasing efforts towards achieving the 2030 Agenda for mountains in our working area - the Hindu Kush Himalaya (HKH) - stems from both the global level and the level of individual national governments. Although the situation varies across the eight countries of the HKH, in general, mountain areas and issues are marginal to central government concerns. This has myriad effects in terms of national budgets, data collection and availability, political and administrative power, which is also mirrored at the global level. A recent significant effort we facilitated built on the scientific results of the comprehensive HKH Assessment report, and culminated in ministerial-level agreement on a collective HKH Call to Action to accelerate fulfillment of the SDGs in the mountains; take coordinated climate action; strengthen regional cooperation; promote a united voice for the mountains; recognize the uniqueness of mountain people; enhance ecosystems resilience; and enhance data and knowledge sharing. We anticipate that this HKH Call to Action will provide fuel for the required acceleration of efforts towards achievement of the 2030 Agenda in the HKH mountains.

Other (Please, specify in the box below)	1
Other (please specify)	The Mountain Partnership is a significant platform for promotion of the mountain agenda and is an important global convener for institutions working on mountain issues. The efforts of the Mountain Partnership could be enhanced internally through more interactive and easily accessible knowledge management platform that could facilitate more information sharing. This in turn could help enhance external communications through more effective partners amplification of shared messages and activities. Technology can help, but in the end, networks always require the people who are dedicated to a shared agenda and who are willing to commit their own time and money to the network.
